SCHOOL TRAGEDY

G. D. Jefferis, the head boy, was a witness.

Vivian Tanner, aged fourteen, the Blue Coat School boy who fatally stabbed himself. Leonard B. Shuffrey also gave evidence.

At the inquest on Vivian Tanner, the Blue Coat School boy, two other boys of the school said they had kicked him for his lax tough judging. They were exonerated by both coroner and jury.

MARQUIS' TWINS NAMED

Ladies Mary and Rose Paget, Lord Anglesey's children, after the christening yesterday of their twin brother and sister.

Marchioness of Anglesey (centre), her mother, the Duchess of Rutland, and Lady Caroline Paget, her eldest daughter, who is aged ten.

SOCIETY WEDDING IN LONDON—HEIRESS MARRIED TO A SAILOR

Lieutenant-Commander Evan Cavendish, R.N., with his bride, Miss Esmé Irby, passing beneath the arched swords of their guard of honour after their wedding yesterday at St. Paul's, Knightsbridge. The guard of honour was composed both of bluejackets and officers. The bride is a considerable heiress through her mother, the Hon. Mrs. Gilbert Smyth.

Duke of Rutland, the twins' grandfather.

The twins after the christening—the Earl of Uxbridge and his sister, Lady Katherine Paget.

The King and Queen, who were both represented, were godparents to the twin babies of the Marquis and Marchioness of Anglesey yesterday, when they were christened at the Chapel-Royal, St. James'.

HUSBAND SUES MOTHER-IN-LAW.

Allegation That She Enticed Wife Away.

5-POINT ULTIMATUM

'Smoked Without Permission and Dined Minus Collar.'

An extraordinary action was started before Mr. Justice Darling yesterday by Mr. Charles Sanderson, of Floss House-gardens, Keighley (Yorks), who sued his mother-in-law, Mrs. Hannah Hudson, a widow, of Port Elizabeth, South Africa, for "enticing his wife away and harbouring her against his will."

His case, as stated by Sergeant Sullivan, K.C., was that a year after the marriage Mrs. Hudson came from South Africa and took Mrs. Sanderson back with her after declaring that he had married her daughter for her money. Mrs. Sanderson benefited under her father's will of £20,000. Complaints made against the husband, said counsel, were that he was disrespectful to his mother-in-law, had smoked without her permission and appeared at the meal table minus a collar, and did not go to church with his wife.

Mrs. Hudson, in defence, denies the statement of claim and sets out grounds for the wife being driven away from home.

6 A.M. DEPARTURE.

Story of "Two Eligible Suitors," Who Mrs. Hudson Favoured.

Sergeant Sullivan, K.C., opening the case for Mr. Sanderson, said that his wife was a widow at the time he married his present wife. She came from South Africa. Their wedding took place at a Wesleyan chapel in Morecambe in October, 1920.

They then resided at Keighley, where Mr. Sanderson had a nice house. They appeared to have everything for domestic happiness. There was one matter that created a difficulty between them.

Mrs. Sanderson was thirty-six years of age, and she seemed to have raised an objection to the marital relationship in her early married life.

Another trifling matter was that she was a great churchgoer. Her husband accompanied her to the door of the church, but, except on the occasion of the marriage, he did not enter afterwards, notwithstanding that his wife desired that he should share in her devotion.

FIVEFOLD INDICTMENT.

Towards the end of July Mr. Sanderson was in the kitchen when his wife summoned him into the dining-room, where he found her with her mother and her sister.

His wife then announced that she was ceasing that night to be his wife except in name and in the eyes of the law, and that she was deserting him.

Mr. Sanderson was a cashier in an ironworks, and had a salary of between £400 and £500 a year. His wife was the daughter of a contractor in South Africa, who died in 1919 and left £20,000, the income of the estate being left to Mrs. Hudson for life, and the remainder to the children at her death.

Mr. and Mrs. Sanderson's life was extremely happy until July, 1921, when Mrs. Sanderson's mother and sister arrived from South Africa on holiday. There was no trouble at first.

He demanded upon what ground she was making such a decision, of which he had no previous intimation, and these indictments were made against him:—

1. He did not accompany her beyond the church door, though he used to go so far.
2. On many occasions he smoked in the dining-room without her mother's permission before he lit up.
3. He had not been respectful in his attitude towards her mother.
4. He frequently got up when he had finished dinner without asking her mother's permission to do so.
5. He had on two occasions sat down at meals without having his collar on.

"DOMINATING FIGURE."

Proceeding, Sergeant Sullivan said that Mrs. Hudson, whom he described as "a dominating figure with a domineering manner," supplemented these by saying to Mr. Sanderson that there were far more serious grounds upon which his wife should leave him.

She said that he had deceived her daughter and herself as to his social position; that he had no right to propose marriage because that position was very much inferior; and that it was outrageous to propose because there were two eligible suitors for her daughter's hand. She added that it was clear Mr. Sanderson had married her daughter for her money.

"Mothers-in-law," observed Sergeant Sullivan, amid laughter, "are proverbially sensitive as to the social requirements of sons-in-law sitting down to dinner without buttoning their collars."

That night, proceeded counsel, Mrs. Hudson and her daughter made preparations to leave Mr. Sanderson's house, and they left the next morning before six o'clock. They went to a friend's house in town, where they conveyed the impression that they had to leave for their lives.

LIFE LOST FOR DOLL.

Little Girl's Concern for Pet's Wet Clothes.

SET HERSELF ON FIRE.

The pathetic story of how a little girl's solicitude for her doll led to her death was related at a Paddington inquest yesterday on Winifred Margaret Grange, aged three, who lived with her parents at Aberdeen-place, Maude Vale. The mother said that on Christmas Day when Winifred returned from a walk the child was much concerned because her doll's clothes were wet.

Left alone in the kitchen for a few moments she tried to dry the garments by hanging them over the fire-guard in front of the kitchen grate. While doing so her own clothing caught alight and she was terribly burned. She died in the hospital last Saturday.

A verdict of Accidental death was recorded. "Harold is on fire, Mum," was the cry which startled Mrs. Lucy Belton, of Cagthorpe, Lincs, while she was upstairs dressing.

On rushing down she found her four-year-old son, Harold, with his flannellette nightshirt in flames. He died later from shock.

His brother, aged ten, had gone downstairs to make some tea and had been mending the fire with paper.

TWO GIRLS MISSING.

18-Year-Old Friends Disappear at Hove—Brown Hair and Blue Eyes.

Two attractive Hove girls, who have been friends since their school-days, have mysteriously disappeared together.

Their names are Hilda Miles and Ethel Brown.

Both are eighteen years old. Both have brown hair and blue eyes and both are 5ft. 10in. in height.

When last seen Hilda was wearing a long green coat with black astrakhan collar, and her companion had on a dark brown coat and fawn tam-o'-shanter.

The girls live a few hundred yards from one another.

POISONED PETS.

Prize Cats and Dogs Fall Victims to Deadly Food at Bromley.

Bills posted by the R.S.P.C.A. in the Bromley (Kent) district give warning of the mysterious poisoning of dogs and cats.

"Deadly poison in raw meat is used," states the local inspector. "The victims die in two or three minutes."

The latest animals that have been poisoned include two prize cats, a bull terrier and a Pekie.

LONDON BY-ELECTION.

Whitechapel Polling Fixed to Take Place on February 8.

Whitechapel by-election writ was received yesterday by the Mayor of St. George.

Nomination day takes place for January 31 and polling will take place on Thursday, February 8.

The candidates are Mr. Harry Gosling (Labour), Mr. S. M. Hosen (Prohibitionist) and Mr. J. D. Kiley (Liberal).

TOWN CLERK'S £2,500.

Westminster City Council Grant £240 a Year Salary Increase.

Westminster City Council, at yesterday's meeting, raised the salary of the town clerk, Sir John Hunt, to £2,500 a year, and he will be permitted to retain fees received by him as returning officer.

When Sir John was appointed to the post in 1900 the salary was fixed at £1,200, rising by annual increments to £1,500.

In 1908 he was granted an increase of £250 a year. The present increase represents approximately £240 a year.

£1,300 DIAMONDS DEAL.

Youth Accused of Sham Robbery in False Pretences Charge.

The financial dealings of a young man who, according to the prosecution, arranged a sham burglary were described at the Old Bailey yesterday, when Maurice Pinkus Singer, aged twenty, was charged with obtaining goods by false pretences and fraudulent conversion. The hearing was adjourned.

Mr. Percival Clarke, for the prosecution, said that Singer had possession of a shop in Tottenham Court-road, and in two months he obtained £1,300 worth of jewellery on credit or approval from diamond merchants.

To one he said he was marrying a girl with "a few thousands."

On November 13 he rang up the police and told them his shop had been entered by burglars and that £2,000 worth of diamonds and other articles were missing.

Singer had insured the contents of the shop for £4,200.

RUBBER ROADS.

London Street Undergoing Novel Experiment.

DURABILITY TEST.

An interesting experiment with rubber paving blocks is being made by the Holborn Borough Council. The entire width of a section of Little St. Andrew-street, where it joins St. Martin's-lane, is being laid with these blocks.

The blocks are composed of a special hard rubber composition, and are provided with ribs on each side for the purpose of inter-locking, the joint being made with bitumen.

As the blocks are the size of the ordinary wood blocks they look much the same when laid, except that they appear a shining black.

Another section of the same road is to be laid with blocks having a concrete foundation, with a rubber covering, which in use will be about half an inch thick.

The cost of such a system of road covering is greater than where wood or other systems are used, but it is claimed that it lasts three or four times as long.

Twenty-five years ago, for instance, sheet rubber was laid at the entrance of Euston Station, and is still in good condition.

The experimental sections in Little St. Andrew-street are likely to have a severe testing, for at a recent census of traffic it was found that during the day an average of 400 vehicles an hour passes through the street. Whilst some of these are light vehicles, the majority are heavy commercial lorries.

If the new blocks prove successful it is not difficult to imagine the London of the future as rubber-paved.

LETTER THREATS.

Persecuted Girl's Father Dies After Prosecution of Artist Began.

Before William David Parsons, a young black-and-white artist, was brought up at Birmingham yesterday for sending anonymous letters threatening Miss Nellie Edith Silk, a neighbour, it was announced that the girl's father had been taken ill after the previous hearing and had died.

Two of the letters sent to Miss Silk, who was afraid to go out at night, alluded to the Ilford and Bournemouth murders as the fate designed for her.

The stipendiary magistrate said the letters were "the contemptible work of a miserable creature." Parsons' counsel characterised them as "the product of a foolish, freakish, morbid mind."

DIED IN CINEMA.

Scarborough Shopkeeper's Collapse After Speaking to Wife.

While visiting the Lonsborough Theatre at Scarborough, Mr. Henry Zepfel, aged about forty, a local shopkeeper, remarked to his wife and daughter, "It's a beautiful picture."

He immediately collapsed and when carried outside was found to be dead.

RACE FOR LIFE.

Signalman's Dash to Snatch Boy of Three from Path of Express.

Seeing a boy aged three walking on the railway line towards a Waterloo-Portsmouth express, Charles Sansom, a signalman at Havant, dashed from his box to the line.

He rescued the child, who is the son of a Portsmouth accountant, but there was only a yard or so to spare before the express thundered past.

MARCHIONESS' TWINS.

Picturesque Christening Ceremony at Chapel Royal—The King's Cup.

The twin sons (the Earl of Uxbridge) and daughter of the Marquis and Marchioness of Anglesey were christened yesterday at the Chapel Royal, St. James'.

The young Earl was named George Charles Henry Victor, and the baby girl Lady Katherine Mary Veronica Paget. The King and Queen gave a silver cup inscribed with these names.

The King was represented by Lord Valentia, and the Queen by Lady Alexander Paget.

The Duke of Rutland (grandfather) was sponsor with the King and Queen for the Earl of Uxbridge, and the godparents of Lady Katherine were Lady Patricia Herbert, Miss Veronica Duff and Major Crankshaw. The service was choral.

Among those present were the Duchess of Rutland.

AN APOLOGY.

In our issue of yesterday we published a summarised report of the divorce case of Meade v. Meade and Glover, in which it was mentioned—with reference to the evidence that the petitioner had lived with the lady known as Mrs. Raymond—"that this lady had had a child." It appears that there was no evidence suggesting that this lady had had a child by Mr. Meade, and we tender our sincere regrets and apology to this lady and Mr. Meade for any erroneous impression conveyed by our report.

£85,000 CLAIM FOR ANTIQUES.

Expert Alleges That £800 Bureau Was Worth £70.

TALES OF FAKING.

Varnish Like Treacle To Give Look of Age, Says Witness.

Remarkable evidence was given yesterday before the Official Referee, Sir Edward Pollock, concerning antique furniture, for which £100,000 was paid.

Mr. Adolphe Shrager is claiming a return of nearly £35,000 paid by him to Messrs. Dighton, Limited, Mr. B. L. Dighton and H. W. Lawrence, directors of an antique furniture firm.

A Chippendale fret cabinet, said Mr. H. Cescinsky yesterday, for which £50 had been paid, was, in his opinion, worth from £8 to £10s.

Referring to a pair of Queen Anne seats, priced at £200, the witness said they were made up of three kinds of wood and might be worth £30. The hearing was adjourned.

'APPEARS TO BE A JOKE.'

Timber Like Part of Window Sash Said To Be in Charles II. Table.

Mr. Herbert Cescinsky, giving evidence yesterday, said that his estimate of the value of an article described as a mahogany Chippendale card table, with original needlework cover, for which £260 was charged, was £52.

Two lacquer cabinets, for which £1250 had been charged, were worth only £85, he thought, as they were not antique at all, but had been made up as a commercial article, made by wholesale manufacturers of fakes, said Mr. Cescinsky.

An article described as a Chippendale fret cabinet, for which £50 had been paid, he valued at from £8 to £10s.

Mr. Disturnal: The next item is what is termed a "love settee."

Witness said it was described as Chippendale, but it was a reconstructed article, made up of fragments of other pieces of furniture. For this £300 had been paid, but it might bring £60 if anyone wanted it.

A Queen Anne red lacquer writing bureau was not a Queen Anne. Part of it was Dutch, and it was French polished, not lacquer.

That was charged at £200. He would not give more than £60 to £70 for it.

"LIKE PART OF WINDOW SASH."

Mr. Cescinsky, referring to a blue lacquered writing table, charged for at £350, said: "I saw that cabinet being made, and have a photograph of it. The trade price would be about £85."

Counsel: The next item is a Charles II. walnut table, with cane top, £375. What do you say to that?

Mr. Cescinsky: I don't know what to say, except that it appears to be a joke. It is not a table. It is quite modern. There is a piece of old timber in it, which looks like part of a window-sash. As for its value, someone might give £10 for it as a joke for a museum of horrors or something of that sort.

A Stuart day-bed, priced at £145, was not Stuart at all, but was modern and made of greenwood, and had been painted in part with a horrible kind of varnish like treacle to give it the appearance of antiquity. He would say that £30 or £40 was the value.

A miniature gate-legged table, priced at £37 10s., was of a class made by the dozen from old timber picked up at the timber yards, and its value was £5 10s to £6.

OTHER NEWS IN BRIEF.

Weather Forecast.—Mainly fair in the south; rather unsettled in north. Lighting-up time 5.35 p.m.

Buried Alive.—Jesse Turley was killed by an eighty-ton fall of rock at Penic Colliery, Rhondda Valley.

Sir James Craig, Premier of Northern Ireland, yesterday had an interview with the Home Secretary in London.

Free Milk by Fraud.—Poplar Borough Council has recovered £228 from people who obtained free milk by misrepresentation.

M.P.'s Lifeboat Scheme.—Mr. F. D. Roberts, M.P., has proposed a scheme to raise £9,000 in Northants for the lifeboat centenary.

Toys from the Queen were distributed when the Rotherhithe branch of the British Legion entertained 600 children at the local Town Hall.

In Grand Turk, a West Indian island of ten square miles, labour is so scarce that it is unlikely that agriculture will ever make much headway, says the Commissioner's report.

Fatal Smoke.—While leaving the top of an omnibus, where he had gone from the inside to smoke, William Sampoos, a Bermondsey taxicab driver, fell and died from injuries received.

FRANCE DECIDES ON STERNER METHODS IN RUHR

General Weygand's Plans to Quell Defiance—Berlin Urges Sabotage—Talk of a Coup.

NO MORE COAL FOR UNOCCUPIED GERMANY

Mayence Riot Quashed—Sharp Proclamation to Town—British Cabinet to Discuss New Situation.

Stern methods of control are to be exercised by the French in the Ruhr as a result of German hostility.

General Weygand has arrived at Dusseldorf to arrange for a single central control which could deal immediately with any unforeseen developments of German resistance. The sending of coal to unoccupied Germany will be stopped to-day.

Mayence, where rioting occurred after the trial of the Ruhr coalowners, has received a sharp lesson. The French General there has taken control of the inactive German police, and French troops have received orders to use their arms in cases of disorder. Berlin is urging sabotage and there are rumours of an impending "coup."

The British Cabinet meets at 10, Downing-street to-day, and the suggestion that British troops should be withdrawn from Germany will, it is understood, be discussed.

GENERAL WEYGAND GETS DOMINIONS' VOW TO GUARD TO WORK IN THE RUHR. GALLIOLI GRAVES.

No Coal from To-day for Storm of Protest Against Unoccupied Germany. Turkish Demand.

BERLIN STILL PLOTTING. SANCTIFIED GROUND.

General Weygand, Foch's Chief of Staff, arrived yesterday in Dusseldorf, says the Exchange, with M. Lefevre, Minister of Public Works, who travelled as a working engineer and not officially.

An important conference was immediately held with General Degoutte. The Liberte states that several measures were decided upon with the object of breaking down German resistance and stopping the departure of coal into unoccupied Germany. The latter measure comes into force to-day.

German Customs officials have been warned that no official documents are to be sent out of occupied territory, and that they will be held responsible.

The first detachment of railwaymen, numbering 600 men and 35 officers, has left Paris, en route for the Ruhr.

German railwaymen and postal officials continue recalcitrant, according to the Liberte, although the trains continue to run but very irregularly.

Pressure from Berlin continues in the direction of sabotage.

Herr Thyssen and the other mineowners who were court-martialled at Mayence returned to Essen to-day and were accorded an immense popular reception. Dense crowds sang national songs—Reuter.

The Echo de Paris correspondent at Dusseldorf reports that preparations are being made by the Orgbesh, the German Nationalist organisation, for some kind of coup.

M. Poincaré stated yesterday that the expenses of the Ruhr occupation for January and February would amount to 45,000,000 francs (£1,800,000 nominal value).

REPLY TO MAYENCE RIOT.

French General Says Disorder Will Be Suppressed Without Scruple.

The French Foreign Office announces that calm has been restored at Mayence where crowds demonstrated after the trial of six Ruhr coalowners.

Detachments of French cavalry dispersed the demonstrators who scattered about the town. As the German police remained inactive French troops made arrests.

The correspondent of the Journal at Mayence says that a crowd of between four and five thousand demonstrators proceeded to various hotels in the town, overturning a tramway car, burning French newspapers and molesting civilians and soldiers en route. Windows of the hotels were stoned.

At the Holland Hotel, where numerous French officers are staying, the crowd compelled the orchestra to play "Deutschland Uber Alles."

General Mareschal, commander at Mayence, in a proclamation says:

"Owing to the inactivity of the German authorities and police during yesterday's disorders, the commander of Mayence from to-day assumes control of the German police force."

The military authorities, who hitherto have shown the greatest patience, are ordered henceforth to suppress all attempts at disorder without scruple.

"The troops have received orders to make use of their arms," Reuter.

According to one report Dr. Schlutius, president of the Dusseldorf finance district, has been expelled from the occupied area. A second report says he was sentenced to a year's imprisonment for refusing access to his books.

The astounding demand by the Turks at Lausanne that the territory occupied by the graves of the British and Dominion soldiers who fell at Gallipoli should be made smaller has raised a storm of protest, intensified by the fact that the graves only occupy a small portion of the Anzac area, where many are still undiscovered.

The Imperial War Graves Commission have asked that no effort be spared to keep the ground sacred.

Sir Fabian Ware, Director of the Imperial War Graves Commission, discussed the matter yesterday with Sir Joseph Cook, the High Commissioner for Australia.

Australians and New Zealanders in London are determined to make a big effort to avert what they regard as an outrage against their feelings.

"The whole matter," said Sir Joseph Cook last night, "is receiving the constant attention of the Imperial War Graves Commission, on which all the Dominions are represented, and every human effort is being made to keep that sacred piece of ground, sanctified by the blood of brave men, peculiarly our own."

The Gallipoli graves are being guarded with the utmost care, and any attempt to interfere with them will meet with vigorous resistance.

LAUSANNE ADJOURNMENT.

Draft of Treaty To Be Presented to Turks on Wedne-day.

In British circles at Lausanne, says the Central News, it was stated yesterday that the last plenary session of the Conference will be held to-morrow.

On Wednesday the draft agreement of a Near East Treaty will be handed to the Turks.

In an official British statement, issued yesterday, it was announced, says Reuter, that "while it is hoped the Turkish delegation will be in a position to sign the Treaty which will be presented to them, it is agreed that, if they require time to consider or ask for further explanations, these requests will be conceded and the conference will adjourn its sittings."

Lord Curzon, adds Reuter, has dispatched a letter requesting the Council of the League of Nations, which meets in Paris on Monday, to consider the question of Mosul territory.

It is not improbable that the Council may have to send a Commission to the Mosul vilayet to make an investigation on the spot.

PHARAOH'S SECRET.

Lord Carnarvon Arrives in Egypt for the Opening of the Tomb.

LUXOR, Thursday.

Intense excitement prevails in the whole Upper Nile valley as the day approaches for the opening of the inner mortuary chamber of Tutank Amen's tomb.

"If Lord Carnarvon finds the body of Tutank Amen," said Mr. Herbert Winlock, of the American Archaeological Mission, "I am confident it will be in an excellent state of preservation, especially if the burial vault has not been previously invaded by robbers. The ancient Egyptian went to infinite pains to preserve his body in the world to come," Reuter.

It is not certain whether the inner chamber will be opened on Wednesday or whether the rest of the objects of the ante-chamber will be first removed, says the Exchange.

Lord Carnarvon arrived at Alexandria yesterday to be present at the opening of the tomb.

Mr. W. J. Shorter, aged 78, of Hatching Liberal Club, won a £100 handicap, by winning the 140 entries, there were 140 entries.

DUKE OF YORK GOES TO SCOTLAND FOR WEEK-END.

His Day with Lady Elizabeth Before Departure.

LONDON'S WEDDING GIFT.

The Duke of York spent practically the whole of yesterday with his fiancée, Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon.

In the evening he was present at a display of physical exercises in aid of the London Schools' Hospital Fund at the Albert Hall, and left for Scotland by the 9.20 train from Euston on a visit to Long and Sadlerwood.

To-morrow the Duke is to attend a Scottish football Cup-tie at Hampden Park, Glasgow, and the city is awaiting his visit with an eagerness which ensures an enthusiastic greeting.

The Corporation of London decided yesterday to present a congratulatory address to the Duke of York and allocated a sum of money with which to purchase a wedding present.

MONDAY AN IMPORTANT DAY.

Arrangements for the Duke's wedding are likely to be carried a step further when the King and Queen come to London on Monday, but there is no foundation for the suggestion that the Privy Council to be held by his Majesty on that day has anything to do with the matter.

While in town the Queen will take the opportunity of visiting Princess Mary at Chesterfield House.

Their Majesties will return to Sandringham on Monday until about February 8, when the Court removes to London in preparation for the State opening of Parliament.

"Uncertain Plans."—The Duke of York, declining an invitation to visit Hull for the Royal Sanitary Institute congress, states that, in view of recent events, his plans are very uncertain.

BEGGARS' TRADE UNION.

Provision Against Competition and Taking Undignified Alms.

Fifty professional mendicants have held a congress in Warsaw to establish their own trade union with statutes designed to prevent others in Polish towns from spoiling Warsaw as an area of operations by occasional visits (says an Exchange Copenhagen message).

The congress has decided that every mendicant shall have a defined district, where competition will not be tolerated.

It has also resolved to refuse alms under twenty marks as not a fitting honorarium for any self-respecting union member.

BOMB AND REVOLVER CRIME.

Colonel Who Suppressed Reds Killed by German Anarchist.

A fatal attack was made to-day on Colonel Hector Varela, who headed the military expedition which suppressed the Bolshevik rising in Patagonia in 1921, by Wilckens, a German Anarchist, who killed the colonel with a bomb and a revolver.

Wilckens had been a prisoner of war in France but had escaped, Reuter.

FIGHT FOR MAN'S LIFE.

Gas Victim Brought Round After Three Hours' Artificial Respiration.

Said to be the tallest man in Hastings, a commercial traveller, named Reginald de Guelle, was taken by the police to East Sussex Hospital yesterday suffering from gas poisoning. He was found unconscious in a gas-filled bedroom in Havockroad, Hastings.

For over three hours the police applied artificial respiration. At the end of that time their efforts in restoring respiration were successful. Late last night Mr. de Guelle was still unconscious in hospital.

Mr. de Guelle is a well-known figure in Hastings, and during the recent carnival in aid of the East Sussex Hospital he caused considerable amusement by parading the streets dressed in an Elton boy's suit.

EIGHT MILLION MARKS FOR 100 WORDS.

"Daily Mirror" Prizes for Best Ruhr Crisis Views.

FREE DELIVERY.

Postcards Now Which May Make You Rich in Future.

Would you like five million marks? This prize, together with others, amounting in all to eight million marks, is offered by The Daily Mirror for readers' opinions on the Ruhr crisis.

Successful competitors will have their prizes delivered to their homes, free of any road, rail or shipping charges.

Those intending to compete must write a 100-word expression of their opinions on this question, clearly and concisely indicating what they consider Great Britain should do in view of the delicate situation which has arisen between France and Germany.

Opinions may be written either on a post-card or on a half-sheet of notepaper.

The three prizes offered are:—

FIRST PRIZE..... 5,000,000 marks.
SECOND PRIZE..... 2,000,000 marks.
THIRD PRIZE..... 1,000,000 marks.

The Daily Mirror will award the prizes stated above, and deliver them free of charge to the writers of the three best expressed and logically explained opinions sent to this office.

The eyes of the world are on the Ruhr, and Great Britain's attitude towards the French occupation of Germany's principal coal mining district is a matter for national consideration which becomes more vital as each hour passes.

In the opinion of some of the British Government should actively support the means adopted by the French Government to extract overdue reparations from Germany.

Others think that Downing-street should "sit tight" and watch developments, a policy which has characterised its attitude up to the present.

Whatever your opinion may be, send it to: The Editor, The Daily Mirror, 23-29, Boulevard-street, London, E.C. 4.

and endorse your envelope or postcard "Ruhr" in the left-hand corner.

Competitors should make special efforts to write clearly. They must condense their opinion to 100 words and supply their full name and address.

Head your effort:—

WHAT GREAT BRITAIN MUST DO—AND WHY.

And underneath it tell us in 100 words your views and the reasons which govern them.

It is an essential condition that all competitors accept the decision of the Editor as legally binding in every way.

It is interesting to note that this vast quantity of marks (eight millions) offered as prizes by The Daily Mirror would in pre-war days be worth £400,000 at the currency of twenty marks to the £.

It is entirely a matter of conjecture as to what rate of exchange the mark will be stabilised in the future.

Whether your prize will be worth more or less in the years to come may be decided by the wisdom of British policy at the present moment.

As the closing date of the competition will be announced soon, no time should be lost in sending in your message.

Many people may think that it is an easy matter to write a concise and clear opinion in 100 words.

Do not forget that if you win a prize the great quantity of marks which are yours will be delivered to your home free of any road, rail or shipping charges.

RUMANIA AND WAR.

Hungarian Premier Complains of Extensive Preparations.

VIENNA, Thursday.

At to-day's meeting of the Hungarian Parliament the Premier, Herr Bethlen, stated that the Government was compelled to call the attention of the Entente Powers to the extensive war preparations of Rumania, which were endangering Hungarian safety.

The Entente Powers would be requested to induce Rumania to cease such preparations.—Exchange.

WHAT GREAT BRITAIN SHOULD DO.

SO great is the public interest in the question of reparations and the present position in the Ruhr that thousands of people will welcome an opportunity of expressing their views on a matter that vitally concerns the future of Europe.

Since the crisis began, the columns of many newspapers have been opened to correspondence on the Ruhr. We also have printed a good many letters.

But now we are anxious more fully to ascertain our readers' views, and we are offering a series of prizes, in millions of marks, for the best-expressed and best-argued opinion on the duty of Great Britain.

Should our attitude be one of active co-operation with France? Or should we maintain our "benevolent neutrality"?

We hope that our readers will give us their answers to these questions in the brief space of 100 words allotted

SENSITIVE YOUTH.

A POINT you may have noted about the published "Reminiscences" of the aged is that they nearly always profess to look back upon their school days with affectionate regret.

Yet very old people will often go on to explain that school life, in their days, was infinitely more Spartan than it is now. The old flogging type of schoolmaster has died out. There is much greater comfort in schools. Above all, elaborately organised bullying has become—we are assured—a thing of the past.

The sad case just reported of a boy's suicide at school seems to show, however, that if (as we hope) school life has become more gentle, some boys at least have become too sensitive to face it.

What would have happened to these over-sensitive ones under the rough regime of "Tom Brown," or even of "Vice Versa"?

One can only suppose that they did not exist in those days.

Or, if they existed, they were perhaps not sent to public schools, but were confined by fond parents to milder Academies, like the young Ruskia who seems to have spent a well-sheltered youth in learning the Bible by heart at his mother's knee and in admiring the almond blossoms in his father's garden on Herne Hill.

Eccentric or original youth is perhaps not fitted for the "give and take" of life with ordinary boys. But, for those ordinary boys, the chaff of school life is perhaps a discipline that usefully gives them their first hint of the active competition in the world outside their families.

A NIGHT WITH BURNS.

THE Robbie Burns anniversary was celebrated in the usual manner last night.

It ought to be a high poetic festival, for what lover of poetry loves not Burns? Even on the wrong side of the Tweed his verses (wrongly pronounced) gather enthusiasts in hundreds.

And this of course has become a national festival—for Scotland.

It may be feared, however, that difficulties will arise as years go on, should the prohibitionist element up North increase and grow more powerful. What would the impenitent poet have thought of a "dry" Glasgow? To-day there might be a serious "censoring" of his invocations to "my muse, guid auld Scotch drink."

We fear that, were he alive at the moment, his "earnest cry and prayer to the right honourable and honorable the Scotch representatives in the House of Commons," in favour of the pint pot, would be coldly received by at least one of them—the senior member for Dundee!

THROUGH "THE MIRROR."

France in the Ruhr—Dangerous Hats—The Parson's Income—A Boy's Education—Legal Language.

GERMANY'S "POVERTY."

A WELL-KNOWN axiom tells us that "Work produces wealth." There is no secret in the fact that the Germans have been working harder than most other peoples since the war, and that they have almost to unemployment. In spite of all, however, they broadcast the report of their utter poverty and inability to pay their debts.

How can two such antagonistic facts be reconciled? C. S. T.

POORLY PAID PARSONS.

THERE are many who will agree with Mr. Kennedy-Bell's remarks. I think it is a scandal that such a large majority of the clergy should be so poorly paid. These men are of good education and refinement, and yet are forced to exist, in many cases,

A PERIL TO PASSENGERS.

HAPPENING to be in a Tube train the other day, I sat opposite a woman who was wearing a hat which, I think, easily came into the category "dangerous."

It was broad-brimmed, of black velvet, and embedded into its front was a well-finished piece of steel, or white metal, 16in. long at least, and with two carefully tapered and very sharp points.

Is there such a thing as the right of the individual to travel safely?

A conventional "Beg pardon!" will not restore an injured or spoilt eye. H.

LEARNING LATIN.

I HAVE been much interested in the correspondence about the education at public schools.

I had twenty-five years of classical education on a sum which some councils do not offer to dustmen!

All this applies to vicars as well as to curates. In a large number of parishes where churches are not endowed, and there is no regular stipend for the clergy, the curates are assisted by free-will offering funds, but the vicars have no such help.

They have to exist, perhaps, on the few rents and eke out their incomes in other ways. SYMPATHETIC.

IT HELPS LAWYERS.

WERE all legal documents to be written in plain language half the lawyers would be out of work in six months.

It must not be forgotten that it is the business of the law to clear up the muddles of the law. LEGALITY.

TOO MUCH SCENT.

SURELY the art of using perfumes seems to have been lost by the women of to-day. Passing in the streets, one is suddenly engulfed at times in a wave of strong, cheap scent, emanating from a well-dressed girl of the upper classes.

In former days every woman usually remained faithful to one aroma, which was as much a part of herself as her way of dressing her hair or of holding a fan; but now this "personality" of scent has been forgotten, and all perfumes are used indiscriminately by the same person. MONTAGU-STREET, W. SENSITIVE.

myself, as boy, public school master, and lecturer and coach at Cambridge; and I feel sure that Latin should form part of English education, for many reasons; but that Latin should be rightly taught.

It is execrably taught at present, the result being that, after many years of so-called learning, boys are unable to speak or read Latin easily, or understand it when it is spoken. At the Perse School Latin is taught rightly, with wonderfully good results.

I should say that the starting point should be spoken Latin, not Latin syntax. The best Latin to begin with may be the Latin of the Prayer-Book, or the New Testament. I always think that an excellent start can be made with such a sentence as "Deum laudamus"; these words should be pronounced rightly. Then let the grammar gradually emerge from the sentences. Such a way of learning Latin is quick, sound and interesting. EUSTACE MILES.

IN MY GARDEN.

JAN. 25.—During dry, open weather the lawn should be given attention. Sweep it over, removing all rubbish. Bare places may be re-turfed.

Many lawns are never dressed with rich material, but to obtain a good stretch of turf this should be done once a year. Therefore spread a mixture of ashes from the garden fire, decayed manure and good sandy soil over the grass at once. E. F. T.

HOW WOMEN OUGHT TO BE TRAINED.

SEPARATE EDUCATION FOR BOYS AND GIRLS?

By CYRIL STERN.

LAST summer the president of the British Association for the Advancement of Science made the striking statement that in every cell and fibre of her body woman is different from man.

This scientific truth does not seem to have been taken into account by those who are now asking whether the schoolgirl's brain is "inferior" to that of the schoolboy.

They write and talk as if these two brains could properly be compared with one another.

The truth is that men's minds and women's minds are so entirely different that comparisons are absurd.

The fact that girls do not beat men easily at games or examinations which men have devised for their own special use proves nothing at all.

Nothing is more certain than this, that if women prepared examination papers to suit themselves and then forced men to submit to being tested by them, the men would make a poor show.

We should be told that men's brains were "inferior" to those of women.

The great fault of the present-day educated woman is that she has learned in a school alien to her own needs and inclinations. By the exercise of great self-restraint and sheer hard work she has acquired a share of man's equipment for man's life.

That this equipment too often proves a hopeless failure when applied to woman's life is her tragedy.

Every schoolgirl can see that this kind of education is more often a disadvantage than a gain. Many very clever schoolgirls manage to evade it altogether and are called "dunces" by people less wide awake than themselves. Men, however, to the chagrin of a great many women, obstinately prefer these dunces.

"LEARNED LADIES."

The sneer that this is a sign of the essential depravity of man's nature is merely pitiable.

It is, in truth, a sign of his essential common sense. For a woman who has dressed herself in male clothes is scarcely less grotesque than those whose mind is similarly clad in borrowed garments.

What few women seem to understand is that our present system of education is no accident. It was not invented when the first Education Act was passed.

It has grown up slowly, like a great building, to the strength and beauty of which a thousand hands have contributed.

Unfortunately—for women—these hands were men's hands. They built for themselves, for their own sex. The subtleties and intuitions of woman's mind have no place in this vast structure.

Those women who insist on entering it do so, literally, at their peril. They must sacrifice something of their own genius, of the genius of their sex.

Perhaps for the present women must go on enduring this disability. They have not had time to build their own temples of learning; and the will of the wisp of masculine standards still lures them.

But sooner or later there will be a change. When it comes a "learned lady"—as they are called in the North—will be a sheer delight.

JENNER.

Yesterday's Wedding—New "Leading Lady"—Needy Artists.

APHRODIS OF THE Jenner centenary—he died on January 26, 1823—it is interesting to recall that his discovery was spoken of very slightly in a former Encyclopædia Britannica. The author of the article on Vaccination was a vaccinationist when he received the commission to write it, but became an anti-vaccinationist after he had examined the evidence. He wrote in that sense, and his contribution duly appeared.

The Pretty Milkmaid.

Dr. Jenner's great discovery of vaccine was made through the chance remark of a milkmaid. He was pursuing his country practice at Sudbury one day when a pretty girl applied for advice. At the time smallpox was prevalent, and Jenner jokingly remarked that she might lose her beauty by it. "I cannot possibly take that disease," she remarked, "for I have had the cowpox." The doctor was struck with the remark and determined to test the truth or falsity of the theory.

A Dandy.

Personally, Dr. Jenner seems to have been a bit of a dandy, visiting his patients wearing "a blue coat, with top boots and silver spurs." But he was a simple-hearted man, very kind to the poor and fond of playing his flute or violin, or composing an occasional poem. His portrait, by Northcote, is in the National Portrait Gallery.

Paris Women's Club.

The grandes dames of Paris are proposing, I hear, to have a club of their own. Men will be rigorously excluded, and membership will be very exclusive. Princess Murat, well known in connection with the dances which she organised last year at the Paris Opera, has the project in hand.

From Australia.

Lord and Lady Stradbroke will be coming back to England this spring. Lady Stradbroke, who was Miss Keith Fraser, created a tremendous sensation on her debut as an Oriental at the famous Devonshire House fancy dress ball. She has made herself very popular in Australia, where the Earl is Governor-General of Victoria.

Rousing 'em.

A Kensington debating society evidently believes in Shaw's dictum that if you do not say a thing in an irritating way, no one will pay any attention to it. Two of the subjects down for discussion are worded: "Socialism is a nervous disease" and "Art is directly allied to lunacy."

New Leading Lady.

The leading lady at Wyndham's Theatre next month, when Sir Gerald Du Maurier produces "The Dancers," will be Miss Juliette Compton. She is not connected with our own famous Compton family, but is an American, who has hitherto appeared in revue. She appeared under Mr. Cochran's management in "Fun of the Fays" at the Pavilion, but did not have the leading part. She is known in America as "the Harrison Fisher girl."

"Paddy."

In connection with the first performance this evening of "Paddy the Next Best Thing" as a screen-play it is interesting to know that Mary Pickford was anxious to make the picture, and that American producers unsuccessfully offered large sums for the film rights. It was while making this picture at the Graham-Wilcox studios at Islington, that Mae Marsh received £1,000 a week.

Miss Juliette Compton.

Mrs. Cavendish Bentinck is one of those people who find a "converted garage" makes a very charming residence. She has been lucky enough to secure one off Welbeck-street, for the demand greatly exceeds the supply of these quaint little places.

Harem Fashions?

Leon Bakst, the famous Russian artist, who is at present in New York, has expressed a great desire "to see women all over the world adopt the Oriental costume, as it is so supremely feminine." He would go further even than that. He would adorn each woman with a turban, because, he says, there is no type that a turban does not become if an artist spreads the colours."

Naval Captain's Moustache!

The wedding yesterday at St. Paul's, Knightsbridge, of Lieutenant-Commander Evan Cavendish, R.N., and Miss Esmé Irby, had the real naval atmosphere. Naval uniforms constituted the chief decorative feature of the church, there was a bluejacket guard of honour at the porch, and the bridegroom made his responses in a loud quarter-deck voice. I noticed Admiral Sir Charles Madden, who was not in uniform, and a captain, who was, but wore a moustache.

Catching!

Another of Princess Mary's bridesmaids has become engaged. This time it is Lady Doris Gordon-Lennox, daughter of the Earl and Countess of March and granddaughter of the Duke of Richmond. Like her friend, Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, she is a great favourite with the younger members of the Royal Family. She is good-looking and is always beautifully turned out.

Lady Doris Gordon-Lennox.

Sporting Family.

Lady Doris's fiancé is Mr. Clare Vyner, son of Lady Alwyne Compton-Vyner. He is heir to his grandfather, Mr. Robert de Grey Vyner, the well-known Yorkshire sportsman and racing man. In 1912 Mr. Clare Vyner, whose name was Compton, changed it by royal licence.

Doorkeeping.

Lady Alwyne Compton-Vyner was, during the war, doorkeeper at the Russian Hospital in South Audley-street. She was one of two V.A.D.s who were in the hall to open the door, answer the telephone and, among other things, carry coals to the matron's fire! Lady Alwyne now lives at Newby Hall, Ripon.

Note for Burglars.

The firm which has been the enemy of Bill Sikes for a century has now discovered an extra-tough burglar proof metal, which Sir George Hayter Chubb told us about yesterday at a luncheon at the Victoria Hotel. Sir George is chairman of Chubb and Sons, lock and safe makers, and after hearing about their latest devices I should think that burglary is hardly worth while nowadays!

Seventeenth Century "Deadhead."

Shakespeare's "Henry IV." which is to be the winter production of the O.U.D.S. at Oxford, was once witnessed by Mr. Samuel Pepys. In his diary for January 7, 1668, he tells us that he turned into the King's playhouse to see "Henry IV.," where, apparently, he had a free seat, but, not thinking the entertainment worth staying for, "I took my coach again, and home."

Limited!

There is a precedent in real life, as well as in comic opera, for the decision of the Duke of Leinster to turn himself into a limited liability company. Jimmy Davis did so, and produced comic operas to be administered by "Owen Hall, Limited."

Painter of the Downs.

I hear that an exhibition of water-colours illustrating the Sussex Downs by Mr. Stewart Acton is now being held in Hove. Concerning this artist's work, Mr. Bert Thomas said to me yesterday, "He is, I think, the first painter to convey that wonderful feeling of solidity which the Downs give you." Mr. Acton was a schoolfellow of the late Aubrey Beardsley.

Old v. New Painters

Living, or attempting-to-live, artists regard with envy the recent distribution of funds on behalf of public galleries. For instance, the Melbourne Gallery has acquired works by Van Eyck, Van Dyck and other old masters at multi-millionaire prices; the Chantry Trustees have purchased for the Tate Gallery some drawings by Alfred Stevens to the extent of £2,000, and for £903 William Dyce's "Titian's First Essay in Colour" has followed other pictures by the same artist to the Aberdeen Gallery. How welcome some of this money would have been in the studios!

Disappearing London.

The block of flats now being erected in Sloane-street is rising on the site where, amongst others, once dwelt Sir Charles Dilke and Sir Herbert Tree. At No. 77 Tree lived during the most successful years of his career, with Dilke as his next door neighbour. They shared the same ant door-step, too, for there was no division between the houses in the way of railings or anything of that sort.

Marie Tempest's Quest.

Miss Marie Tempest has not yet settled on a house, but is persevering in her quest round Regent's Park. Why impulse strongly leads her in that quarter she says she does not know, but it may be a sort of homing instinct! At one time she had a delightful house in Park-crescent. This was in the early years of her first marriage, when she was Mrs. Cosmo Gordon-Lennox.

Virtuoso Don Juan!

It will be remembered that Mrs. Humphry Ward made her literary debut with a translation of Amiel's famous "Journal." There is now to be a new edition of that work, including many passages which have hitherto been suppressed; and some of them, I am told, are of a very startling character. They include some spiteful criticisms of France and the French, and some comments on the ladies who sat at Amiel's feet at the time when his friends styled him "the virtuous Don Juan."

PUZZLES FOR GROWN-UPS.

Daily Mirror Office.

MY DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS,—

I really haven't much time to write to you to-day—I have so many official forms to fill up. (One of the joys of being grown up is that the income tax and other authorities are always asking you to fill up forms. They are far worse than any examination papers you may have to solve!) Well, as I say, here am I trying to write you a letter when I have to answer questions like this:—

State whether "you are a widower (or widow) and (a) a female relative of yourself or of your deceased wife (or husband) . . ."

That's how it starts off, anyway—I suppose it gets clearer as you go on, but one might easily think it was one of those puzzles in which a man proves that he is his own grandfather!

These forms are full of "sections," "instructions" and asterisks and footnotes referring you to something else, so that when at last you get a plain, straightforward question to answer, you are certain to find a "catch" in it somewhere which leaves you ten times more puzzled than before.

These authorities who make you fill up forms love these "catches." Instead of asking you a plain question, such as: "How old is your mother-in-law's aunt?" they say: "State age (see Section B) of mother-in-law (if none write 'None') and her aunt (see para. 5 on enclosed sheet) or uncle (a) or great-uncle (d) . . ." And so on.

If forms are not correctly filled up there are various penalties imposed. I hope nothing will happen to me after writing this!

Your affectionate
Uncle Dick.

"WHAT'S IN A NAME?"

Some Puzzles Sent in by My Clever Nieces.

WHAT'S in a name? Surely quite a lot! Don't you think every name seems to mean something? And, strangely enough, people's names generally suit them, don't they? Lily is always a tall, willowy girl; John is so good and honest; Jack is generally rather a handful; and Joyce is usually a tomboy. But have you ever noticed that most names are also words? For instance, Bill is an account; Rose is a flower; Ernest is very much like earnest. One of my clever nieces has sent in the following amusing little puzzle: can you guess what names (of boys or girls) the following words represent? I have shown you the first one.

1. Outspoken—Frank. 2. A virtue. 3. Transport. 4. Both sides of M. 5. An Italian city. 6. A pure white flower. 7. The poetry of movement. 8. An award; a notch; a leapon. 9. What the cat did when her tail was pulled. 10. What you would do if a lady asked for help. 11. A month. Can you solve them? They are rather teasers; I know, but I will show you the solutions next week—and then you will think how easy they were.

A PUZZLE ZOO.

Here is a puzzle Zoo sent in by another clever niece.

1. "Your dirty thumb IS ON my new dress!"
2. Fetch me that pan, there's a good girl.
3. Well, I only wanted a little bit of food.
4. If you want to add up, do it in your copybook.
5. He swaggered along in his new top-hat.
6. Round the River Tapi geraniums grow in profusion.

When you have puzzled them all out, see if you can find the hidden countries in the following sentences. There is only one in each:—

1. He found the TedGER MANY years after.
2. The Turk eyed the man with disfavor.
3. With all my pals I am satisfied.
4. Is Leamington Spa in England? he asked.
5. On his chin a light down was growing.
6. There is a fortune to be made in diamonds.
7. The wolf cub advanced slowly.
8. "I should call it a lynx," said Frank.

If you manage to solve all these puzzles, don't trouble to send in your answers: the correct solution will be published next week.

"HA! HA!"

"DON'T eat so fast," Dickie, said mother, reprovingly. "There is plenty of food on the table."
"I know, mother," replied Dickie, cramming another piece of cake into his mouth, "but I'm afraid I shall lose my appetite before I have eaten as much as I want to."

SQUEAK TRIES TO WASH BLACK WOOL WHITE.

1. Lottie the lamb has a white coat and black legs. Squeak thought she needed a bath.

2. So she brought in some hot water and a bath. "You'll soon be clean, duckie," she said.

3. Lottie, however, felt rather nervous—especially when Wilfred brought in a huge scrubbing brush!

LADIES' BOUDOIR

SIMPLER FASHIONS—FLOWERS AND RIBBONS AGAIN.

There is an individual charm about this braid-trimmed suit which shows the newest sleeve.

THIS is going to be a flowery season, I am told, especially as far as millinery is concerned. We are tired of adorning our hats with glycerined feathers, lacquered fir cones, exotic birds, shells, varnished goose-quills and other oddities, and so a sweet simplicity is going to reign once more.

COUNTRY FLOWERS.

Shady hats will be garlanded with clover, lilies of the valley, mignonette and wallflowers. We'll even rob the nursery of their buttercups and daisies, and the modistes who so shamelessly annexed the flowers during the past two seasons will have to give them back again to the milliners, and make do with ribbons.

VERY FASHIONABLE.

Ribbons are the standby of the modiste, and wonderful things are being done with them. Wide ribbons, narrow ribbons, lacquered and varnished ribbons, poked-worked and stencilled ribbons, ribbons piped with kid, appliqued and shot with gold and silver—all are and will continue to be fashionable.

BEST SHOES.

Ribbon hats so light, cool and comfortable, worn again. Gloves have stiff ribbon gauntlets, sometimes a double gauntlet, one deeper than the other, and contrasting in colour, while rest shoes are very prettily made of interlaced latticed ribbons.

Of a different type, yet equally charming, is this chilly-day one of lemons d'ore.

MARCHIONESS' TWINS.

Picturesque Christening Ceremony at Chapel Royal—The King's Cup.

The twin son (the Earl of Uxbridge) and daughter of the Marquis and Marchioness of Angles were christened yesterday at the Chapel Royal, St. James'. The young Earl was named George, Charles Henry Victor, and the baby girl Lady Katherine Mary Veronica Paget. The King and Queen gave a silver cup inscribed with these names. The King was represented by Lord Valentia, and the Queen by Lady Alexander Paget. The Duke of Rutland (grandfather) was sponsor with the King and Queen for the Earl of Uxbridge, and the godparents of Lady Katherine were Lady Patricia Herbert, Miss Veronica Duff and Major Crankshaw. The service was choral.

HONG KONG COINS CLUE.

Brooch Worn by Unknown Woman Drowned in the Thames.

Made of three Hong Kong coins, a brooch may provide a clue to the identity of an unknown woman found drowned in the Thames yesterday at Battersea. The woman, aged between thirty-five and forty, was 5ft. 2in. in height, and had black hair and brown eyes. An indistinct tattoo mark was on the left forearm. She was wearing a long black dress, a plush coat, with loop fastenings, a black leather belt, a long white woollen scarf, with blue border, and a black and white striped sports coat.

BANKRUPT BARONET.

35 Years Before Appearing Because He Feared Prosecution.

The affairs of a stockbroker adjudged bankrupt thirty-five years ago came before the London Bankruptcy Court yesterday, when at his public examination, Sir Thomas Gordon Fairbairn, Bart., lodged a statement of affairs showing liabilities of £108,965 and a deficiency of £27,965. He said that in 1887 he was declared a defaulter on the Stock Exchange and, with £155 provided by relatives and friends, he left for France, going from there to the United States, where he had worked for Bids, (£3 15s.) a week. In June, 1915, on the death of his elder brother, he succeeded to the family baronetcy. His failure in 1888 was due to losses by speculations on the Stock Exchange, which he estimated at £38,000. He admitted that he had sold stock on behalf of clients, and used the proceeds for his own purposes, and one of the reasons for his failure to surrender earlier was his fear of criminal proceedings.

PETROL FLOOD ON ROAD.

Three Hundred Gallons Wasted Through Mishap to Oil Tank Lorry.

While travelling along the Parade, Leamington, yesterday, a petrol tank lorry belonging to the British Petroleum Company skidded, and coming into collision with a train standard, the tank was punctured and about 300 gallons escaped on to the roadway. Fortunately the fire brigade headquarters are only 100 yards away, and firemen, who were quickly on the scene, turned a hose on the petrol and swilled it away down the drains before it could catch fire.

RESCUED CREW IN STORM.

Gallant White Star Line Officers Awarded Italian Honours.

For gallantry in rescuing the crew of the Italian steamer Monte Grappa during a storm in the Atlantic the Italian Government have bestowed decorations on four officers of the White Star liner Pittsburgh. Captain T. M. Jones has been made a Knight Grand Cross of the Italian Crown and Mr. J. Law and Mr. W. V. Pearson, fourth and fifth officers respectively, who were in charge of the boats, have been decorated with Crosses of Knights of the Italian Crown. Mr. W. S. Quinn, the chief officer, who had been ready for immediate service and who got them away from the ship without mishap of any kind, has been awarded the Cross of a Knight of the Italian Crown.

MAIDS' LUCKY DICE.

Girl Who Beat Opponent by Two for Charity Money.

Throwing the dice for the Maids' Money, under How's Charity, took place at Guildford yesterday. The money is awarded for long service and good conduct. Selected candidates of the seven making application were Maggie Way and Elizabeth Ellis, domestic servants. Miss Way threw the dice and got a 7, against her opponent's 5, receiving £11 19s. Owing to there being no applicants for the Apprentices' Money, the loser received this award, which amounted to £s. 6d. more than the winner of the other charity.

SMALLPOX IN DERBYSHIRE.

The sixteenth case of smallpox from the colliery district of Clown, Derbyshire, was notified yesterday.

UNDER FALSE PRETENCES

By HENRY ST. JOHN COOPER

"You poor, obstinate, proud little darling," said Smith. "Why in heaven wasn't I killed instead?" Her eye-lashes flickered and then glorious violet eyes stared into his.

SYNOPSIS.

YOU have too much money, too few friends, too much time on your hands, no interests in life. Hearing this frank decision from a well-known specialist, Robin Marchant, young, handsome and strong-willed, decides to break away from his old life. He plans to go on a holiday, during which he will live the life of a tramp, sleeping in barns and existing on a few pence daily. Before starting he comes to the rescue of his cousin, Walter Forrester, a well-to-do, easy-going man, who is the chum of a blackmailer named Dulham. Forrester has foolishly written indiscreet letters to a Miss Nina Salisbury, and rather than let them be brought to the notice of his wife—whom he himself really loves and for whom Robin has a deep respect—he decides to pay Dulham.

Robin lends him the money and then starts on his holiday. One day, while resting by the roadside, he is observed by a beautiful girl. Taking him for a real tramp, she taunts him with his laziness and finally offers him work.

He accepts the offer and then finds that the girl, whose name is Alaine Farrell, lives at a fine old Elizabethan house. He sees her father, and after being engaged as chauffeur's assistant learns that a visitor, Mr. Rawley, is expected.

To his amazement Rawley turns out to be none other than Dulham, the blackmailer! Luckily he had never seen Robin before, though the latter had seen him.

Rawley knows that the man whom everyone thinks is Alaine's father, Sir Geoffrey Farrell, is really an impostor named Collinor. He taunts Collinor with this, and threatens to expose him.

Finally he promises to keep silent, but the price of such silence is to be Alaine's hand in marriage. The girl, of course, is quite unaware of this.

Meanwhile Alaine finds Robin a home with an elderly couple named Biggs, who live in a small cottage. Bessie, Alaine's maid, takes a liking to Smith. This annoys Purvis, the chauffeur, who loves Bessie. There is a fight between the two men, which Alaine sees from a window overlooking the garage.

A GENEROUS VICTOR.

HE has killed him," moaned Alaine. She felt sick with horror, and clung to the window-sill.

In the doorway of the garage Sir Geoffrey and Mr. Rawley looked on interestedly.

"He's a bitter, that car, who is the chauffeur fellow of yours," said Rawley. "He's knocked the chap out; it's all over bar shouting. Glad to have seen it though—and oh!" he paused.

Smith had risen, but at the sight of the blood on his face Bessie turned and fled. At the window Alaine, faint and ill, watched because she must. She wanted to shut her eyes, but could not.

Then her thoughts and ideas changed. The primitive savage still dwells in us all. It is to be found, delve one deep enough, in the sweetest and gentlest feminine nature, just a glint of it.

And so Alaine, who had never seen two men fight, stood now watching with flashing eyes and heaving breast. Voicelessly she seemed to be calling to one to go on, to conquer. Yet, of course, this man, this Smith, was not the man of her heart. How could he be?

Ah! Purvis was down, had taken a left under the jaw that had seemed to hit him. She cried, "Splendid, splendid!" muttered Alaine. Her heart was thudding, but as she looked at the man standing there, big, conquering, fine, she shivered.

"Had enough?" Smith inquired.

Purvis rose, shook himself and made a sudden rush. Blows were given, parried, accepted and more blood flowed.

"Best fight I've seen for years," muttered Rawley.

Sir Geoffrey's eyes glistened; his nostrils extended. He seemed like a man taking a large quantity of fresh air. He was living again. Alaine stood at the window drawing long deep breaths. Would it ever end? She closed her eyes for a moment, then opened them again, and saw Purvis stretched full length on the yard.

Smith moved across to his fallen adversary and looked down on him with triumph and pride.

"Sorry, old man! But you asked for it, and I had to hand out the goods. Feeling rocky?"

(Translation, dramatic and all other rights secured.)

Purvis tried to curse, but a broken tooth made him lisp.

"Half a second; wait there," Smith turned to the hose, and directed a jet of water into Purvis's face. The chauffeur gasped, then rose and staggered away into the garage, while Smith coolly turned the stream on to his own face.

The girl at the window laughed. She felt she wanted to applaud.

For the first time she noticed her father and Rawley. They came into the yard and stood talking to Smith.

She saw Rawley pat Smith on his broad back, saw him thrust his hand into his pocket and bring out money—silver—which he offered to Smith. And Smith took it, touching his forehead and pocketing the coins.

Sick, disgusted, disillusioned, Alaine turned away, and the next moment she burst into tears.

"A rattling good scrap," said Rawley. "You fought well and pluckily, my man."

Praise from Mr. Dulham, the blackmailer, the man whom he had asked to hurl through a window!

Smith smiled carefully, for his face was not in a condition to admit smiles to play freely about it.

"You seem to have some science, some knowledge of the art, eh?" said Dulham.

"One picks up a bit," said Smith.

"Then pick this up, my man, and put it in your pocket."

Then it was that Rawley held out to Smith the money, and Smith, knowing he must play the part that he had selected for himself, accepted it, and unknowingly roused Alaine's intense shame and filled her with anger at herself for her own recent enthusiasm.

"Anyhow, some of my two thousand back," he thought.

Patronising Mr. Rawley and Sir Geoffrey strolled out of the garage yard and Smith went in search of Purvis. He found the chauffeur in the little engineer's shop.

"How are you feeling?" Smith asked.

Purvis opened his mouth, and expressed himself plainly. "Look here," Smith said, "if you and I are going to work together, my friend, we must get over this. Either I haven't given you enough of a pasting or there's something radically wrong with you."

"Who are you," said Purvis, "to come 'ere and—take my get away from me?" Bessie and mo was sweethearts before you come showing your nose in."

"Look here, let's discuss the matter. Let's clear the atmosphere, my friend. Now how did you stand with Bessie when I came?"

"We was walking out," said Purvis, "and then you come and now she won't look at me."

Smith listened patiently.

"There is some little misunderstanding," I like Bessie, I like her very much."

"Like 'er!" said Purvis. "Ang your likes!"

"If you think there has been any love-making between us—"

"I don't know nothing about that. All I know is that she comes 'ere and goggles her blooming eyes at you and takes no notice of me, no more than if I wasn't on the earth. I can't stand it, I tell you. The next thing is you and 'er will be getting married."

"Never!" said Smith. Purvis looked up and blinked his swollen eyes.

"Purvis," said Smith, "in a way I am beginning to like you. I am slowly coming to the conclusion that you are not such a blackguard as I thought you were."

He held out his hand. "We'll shake hands," he said. "I've got an idea, Purvis, that you and I are going to be friends."

"I'd be ashamed of myself, if I was a man, 'titing people about," she said. "What do you two look like?"

"Battered heroes," said Smith.

"Battered wrecks," put in Bessie. "Anyhow, Miss Alaine sent me because she wants the two seater car, Purvis, and you got to be ready to go out with 'er in it to Rotham shopping."

"Shopping!" groaned Purvis. "I look like shopping, I do!"

"The car will be there," said Smith.

"Well, I shant," grunted Purvis. "I couldn't drive no car and you can't, so—"

"Drive a potty little car like that," Smith smiled. He was thinking of his own sixty-horse Vauxhall in which he had conscientiously broken legal rules and regulations concerning speed.

Bessie went back to her mistress.

"Please, Miss," she said, "Purvis isn't feeling very well."

"You mean he won't bring the car round, Bessie?"

"No, Miss, but Smith, he'll bring the car."

"Oh, very well! It doesn't matter in the slightest, though I didn't know Smith could drive."

"There seems to be a lot of things, miss, as Smith can do."

Alaine felt very angry, and anger gave her a colour that was most becoming. She looked a degree lovelier than she had ever been before, when, with the small two-seater drawn up before the hall door, Smith watched her descending the steps.

"You!" she said, affecting a start. "Why is Purvis on his feet?"

"Purvis is slightly indisposed, madam," said Smith.

"YOU OBSTINATE DARLING!"

ALAINÉ seemed to hesitate, as though altering her mind about going at all, though, in reality, she had decided most certainly that she would go. Here would be an opportunity for telling the young man what she thought of him.

"You cannot drive a car, I suppose?"

"I have some little knowledge on the subject."

"Oh, very well. Have you?"—she stared him in the face—"have you been fighting?"

He affected a slight start of surprise.

"A little argument."

"I had no idea that you were a person of that type, Smith. Kindly open the door."

He kindly opened the door, and the young lady stepped into the car.

The man had fought as heroes fight—bravely, splendidly—and then—then had accepted money from Gordon Rawley, had touched his forehead in servile gratitude for alms.

"You drive as if you were afraid of the car."

"I am naturally of a timid disposition," he replied, "and, unless I make a mistake, this is an eight-horse powered car. Eight horses are a responsibility." He spoke quite gravely.

"Nonsense!" she said, sharply. "I like Purvis's driving much better than yours."

Smith's injured eye was twitching and smarting. He looked at her with a certain amount of the other. "Disagreeable little thing!" he thought to himself.

"Can't you drive faster? I hate crawling," she said, pettishly.

He accelerated the pace to about twenty miles an hour.

"Stop!" said Alaine.

He throttled down, applied the brake and brought the car to a standstill.

"Change places. I am going to drive. Your driving gets on my nerves—you really drive exceedingly badly!"

"In my last place," Smith observed, "I was considered to be quite a respectable driver."

At no time was Alaine a good driver. In fact, she drove very badly, and, conscious of the fact, always drove very slowly—usually on second.

Now she was angry. Besides, she had told Smith that he drove too slowly to please her. The car started with a violent jerk as she let in the clutch. They were off, zig-zagging cruelly.

Alaine compressed her lips, set her teeth and glared straight ahead down the road. She was almost certain that this impudent fellow beside her was laughing at her. "Very well!"

Twenty, twenty-five, the speedometer had jerked towards thirty.

"I wonder if we shall get round that corner or land in the ditch?" Smith thought.

They landed in the ditch, and the driver was shot forward.

Smith himself scarcely realised what happened until he found himself on his knees beside the girl, looking down at a white face on which appeared a spot of blood. Her eyes were closed; she might be dead.

Words burst from him in a torrent, words over which he had no control, wild, passionate, self-upbraiding. Why had he let her do it?

"You poor, obstinate, proud little darling!"

Long curled lashes flickered against a white cheek; perhaps she was not quite so unconscious as she appeared. He went on unheeding.

"I ought to be shot for letting you make such a little fool of yourself. Why in Heaven wasn't I killed instead? Why weren't you spared, Alaine, my beloved?"

He went on, half-demented, and told himself aloud that he wanted to kiss her. He lashed himself with his own scorn and contempt. Why had he allowed her to do it? Why hadn't he been firm? She could not drive, and this—this was the result.

The lashes flickered again, and then glorious violet eyes stared into his.

"Smith," she said firmly, "there is a cottage round the bend in the road. Please go and get me a glass of water."

"Certainly, miss!" He rose from his mud-stained knees and crawled down the bank. He gained the road, paused to switch off the ignition of the roaring engine and then hurried towards the cottage.

Alaine sat up, and, with the instinct of a woman, lifted both hands to her face. Her eyes watched Smith down the road; she wondered if he would turn to look back, but he didn't. She sighed and began to fill her mouth with hairpins.

Another fine instalment to-morrow.

HANDICAPPER'S WORK FOR THE BIG SPRING RACES

Roman Bachelor Heads the Lincolnshire. SHAUN SPADAH.

Place of Honour for 1921 Grand National Winner.

The chief feature in yesterday's sport was the publication of the weights for the big Spring Handicaps, the fourth meeting of Sheffield United and Nottingham Forest in the English Cup, and the racing at Plumpton. Chief features of the day were:

Football—Meeting for the fourth time in the first round of the English Cup, Sheffield United managed to beat their rivals, Nottingham Forest, by 1 goal to 0.

Spring Weights—As expected, Roman Bachelor was found at the head of the handicap for the Lincolnshire. Shaun Spadah holds the place of honour in the Grand National.

SPRING WEIGHTS.

Weather-vane and the Lincolnshire Handicap—Old Tay Bridge Goes Up.

The statement that the King's colt Weather-vane is to be trained for the Lincolnshire gave additional interest to the weights for the big spring handicaps which made their appearance yesterday.

Weather-vane proved himself a spring horse last season by winning the Greenham Stakes at Newbury from the colt Poisoned Arrow, and as he beat the latter at level weights it is reasonable to expect to find him among the acceptances next week, seeing that the Arrow is now asked to concede 17lb.

Roman Bachelor, as was generally anticipated, is top weight for the first big handicap, and, of course, Poisoned Arrow is very near the top of the list.

The latter's fine show in the Cambridgeshire followed by an easy victory over Captain Fracasse at Newbury assured him of plenty of weight, and I should not be surprised if those connected with the colt come to the conclusion that he has a little too much.

Soldennis, one of the most popular "early fancies," is not badly treated, but another of doubtful stamina, Black Gown, to wit, appears to have too much weight.

Roman Bachelor, third last year, has only gone up 7lb., whereas Captain Davey's colt has jumped 7lb.

CRUBENMORE AND EXPRESS DELIVERY. Crubenmore is by no means badly treated with 8st. 2lb., or only 1lb. more than he carried into third place in the Royal Hunt Cup. Express Delivery was receiving 20lb. when he beat Mr. Bower Ismay's colt later at Goodwood, now the difference is reduced by no less than 29lb.

My view, that Mr. Topham would find some difficulty in choosing between Shaun Spadah and Turkey Buzzard in the Goring Steeplechase has been confirmed. The 1921 winner just gets the place of honour—by 1lb. from Mrs. Hollins' horse.

Old Tay Bridge has paid the penalty for his recent victories by jumping from 3st. 8lb. three years ago to 12st. 3lb., or 3lb. more than Sir Huon, who was at the top of the list last year.

Arravale, who had 10st. 11lb. last year, has also gone up, but a case of 5lb. will make no appreciable difference to his chance. Report has it that he is jumping splendidly at home, and while he keeps well is not likely to be another favourite for the big Liverpool race. Conjuror II. and Punt Gun, two new comers to the race, are conveniently weighted if good enough, but it should be noted that the latter has to meet Madrigal on 6lb. worse terms for the length and a half defeat the latter sustained in the Grand National last November.

PLUMPTON FAVOURITES.

Favourites turned over a new leaf at Plumpton yesterday. From Ormskirk in the Goring Steeplechase to Brownstown in the Hopeful Hurdle they came home in a string that more than atoned for their shortcomings on the previous day.

The victory of Columbus in the Selling Hurdle was followed by an inquiry into the running of Hampstead Heath. Having heard the evidence of the trainer and jockey, that the horse was safe, the stewards cautioned them to their future conduct.

Kempton offers much more attractive sport to-day, with the Hurdle Handicap as the chief event. Double Up and Forest Fire are the "stars" left to fight. Doubt if either will give the weight to Lord Lonsdale's smart colt, Royal Highness.

Turkey Buzzard and Shaun Spadah, engaged in the Littleton Steeplechase, are, I hear, in reserve for the Bramford Steeplechase to-morrow, when Sir Huon can join in a fine National trial.

BOUVIER.

D. J. Norton, one of the youngest competitors in the amateur snooker championship.

Kid Lewis, who is appearing in an exhibition match at Southampton to-night.

R.L. CUP DRAW.

Holders at Home to Huddersfield—Hard Games in Prospect.

The draw was made yesterday for the first round of the Cup under Rugby League (N.U.) rules as follows:

Batley v. Oldham, Dewsbury v. Bradford Northern, Broughton Rangers v. Hull, Keighley v. Hull Kingston Rovers, Leigh v. Leeds, Rochdale Hornets v. ST. HELENS BEAT KEIGHLEY.

Well Deserved Victory at Home by 14 Points to Seven.

St. Helens beat Keighley in a Rugby League match at St. Helens yesterday by 14 points to seven.

A try by Flynn to a goal by Gray gave the home side a lead of three points to two at half-time. In the second half St. Helens increased St. Helens' advantage with a try, but a try by Parkin and a goal by Gray put the visitors in front. St. Helens then rallied, however, scoring twice through Flynn and a dropped goal through Stanley Lewis gained a well-deserved victory.

EASY FOR BLACKHEATH.

London University Outplayed and Beaten at Rectory Field.

At Rectory Field yesterday Blackheath gained an easy Rugby victory over the London University, scoring four goals (one a penalty) to nothing. They held a big advantage forward, but the backs were often erratic and though the University defended stubbornly many good scoring chances were lost.

Cumberlege early on kicked a penalty goal and later placed goals from two excellent tries by Hubbard, the home side at the interval thus having a thirteen points lead.

Blackheath did better subsequently, but it was not long before Blackheath went further ahead, Hopkins rounding off a clever movement by scoring under the posts for Cumberlege to add the points.

Blackheath, though controlling the game in the later stages, failed to add to their score.

RUGBY GAME'S CENTENARY.

The celebration of the Rugby football centenary has been provisionally fixed for Thursday, November 1, and it is now proposed that a match shall be played at Rugby between England and Wales versus Scotland and Ireland.

ESSEX' "LAST EFFORT."

Interest To Be Encouraged by Smaller Minimum Subscription.

For years the Essex County Cricket Club has battled bravely against adverse circumstances, and from time to time have been almost submerged through financial troubles.

They have now decided on what is described as a "last effort" to increase interest in the county game throughout the county. They hope to attract a far more numerous membership by reducing the minimum subscription for men to a guinea, though at the same time they appeal to old and new members to pay an additional voluntary subscription of half a guinea a year.

There is an urgent need for funds, though in view of the improved form shown by the team last season they desecy much better support.

FOR SATURDAY'S GAMES.

Newcastle Make Drastic Changes After Defeats at Southampton and Chelsea.

Following their defeats against Southampton and Chelsea, Newcastle are making several alterations for the return encounter in the North-East derby.

Mutch will come in and keep goal to the exclusion of Bradley. It will be his first appearance since he was injured at Sheffield last September. The left wing will be quite new. Aitken is dropped at inside right and Woods crosses from the left to fill that vacancy. In the right wing, who did the hat trick in a reserve match this week, will figure at inside left, and Mitchell takes Seymour's place.

For their meeting with Oldham at White Hart Lane the Spurs hope that Forster may be able to resume his morning form. Forster will undergo thorough trial of his fitness; should he be found unable to play Brown will continue, and the rest of the side will be unchanged.

It is remarkable that there has never been a drawn game between these teams, and the Spurs have won every previous meeting between the teams at White Hart Lane.

Blackburn Rovers is yet another team to try the experiment of playing a full back at centre forward. Since Winstone set the example last season, numerous clubs have followed suit. Crawley will occupy the position to-morrow for the Rovers against Cardiff, and Bond is displaced by Holland at outside right.

OTHER SPORT IN BRIEF.

TERRORISED WIFE WINS HER CASE.

Separation for Daughter of Former Indian Judge.

HUMILIATION.

Mr. Justice Horridge's View of Husband's Cruelty.

Cruelty by her husband while they were in India was the ground on which a judicial separation was granted yesterday by Mr. Justice Horridge to Mrs. Constance White, of Park-road, Wembley.

Her husband, Mr. G. H. White, of Queen's-crescent, Southsea, failed in his petition for restitution of conjugal rights.

Mrs. White, the daughter of a former Judge in Bombay, alleged that her husband, who was in the Indian police, became intemperate and terrorised by his conduct she was forced to leave him.

Commenting on various incidents, Mr. Justice Horridge said Mr. White had humiliated his wife as badly as a woman could be humiliated.

Mr. White, in the witness-box, said he never drank to excess when his wife was with him in India, but he did drink a good deal from 1919 when he realised that she was not going to live with him again.

He denied that on one occasion he tried to go to bed with a loaded revolver and a lighted lamp in his hand. He had never threatened to shoot his wife and son.

Mr. White also said there was no truth in his wife's statement that at the annual police dinner at Poona he shouted down the Deputy Inspector-General.

SUPERIORS CARICATURED.

Was there any trouble over the dinner?—Yes. I unfortunately drew caricatures of my superiors. I went up next day to say good-bye to the Inspector-General and he told me he thought my conduct very insubordinate. About four months later I was transferred to another post at Kaira, which carried less pay.

Cross-examined by Mr. Tyndale (for the wife), Mr. White admitted there were occasions before 1919 when he took too much to drink.

Was there anything else that injured you besides the caricaturing?—I had disagreements with my superior officers on official subjects.

Mr. Justice Horridge: Have none of your superior officers ever mentioned the question of drink to you? Now, be careful.—Mr. White: They have. In 1919 I was checked by my official superior.

THE JUDGE PUZZLED.

Mr. Tyndale: Do you love your wife?—Mr. White: I did until these proceedings were instituted. I don't think you can love anybody who makes such allegations as she has.

You don't even like her now?—No. Mr. Justice Horridge: Then I don't understand the object of these proceedings. I want to understand what is the meaning of them if you don't want her back.

Mr. White: The question of the boy necessitates her coming back to me.

Mr. Tyndale: Would you be glad if she came back to you in fourteen days?—Mr. White: I should not.

Is not the real object of this case an attempt to avoid supporting your wife in future?—My object is to educate the boy.

LETTER THREATS.

Persecuted Girl's Father Dies After
Prosecution of Artist Began.

Before William David Parsons, a young black-and-white artist, was bound over at Birmingham yesterday for sending anonymous letters threatening Miss Nellie Edith Silk, a neighbour, it was announced that the girl's father had been taken ill after the previous hearing and had died.

Two of the letters sent to Miss Silk, who was afraid to go out at night, alluded to the Ilford and Bournemouth murders as the fate designed for her.

The stipendiary magistrate said the letters were "the contemptible work of a miserable creature." Parsons' counsel characterised them as "the product of a foolish, freakish, morbid mind."

TABLE TENNIS RUSH.

Over 3,000 Entries on Last
Day for Championships.

GAMES START NEXT WEEK.

The huge task of sorting the entry forms of The Daily Mirror Table Tennis Championships has now been complete, and all forms have been dispatched to the respective area organisers. Games should commence next week in every part of the country.

Last-minute entries provided a surprising rush. On the closing day over 3,000 entries were received by telegram, telephone, postcard, and letter, bringing the total applications for forms up to 36,452.

Individual acknowledgment of last-minute entries was impossible, but all who notified their wish to compete may rest assured that entry forms were made out on their behalf.

The tussle for the championships, which now begins in real earnest, will be participated in by players from Aberdeen to Penzance, and from Londonderry to Cork. The method of determining the champions has been made as simple as possible.

Each of the nineteen areas into which the United Kingdom has been divided will first play as a self-contained unit, and each area will have the right to send a certain number of players, based on the number of entries, to take part in the finals in London.

In all, twenty-two women and sixty-four men will compete as finalists. The champions (of both sexes) from each area will be entitled to a valuable gold medal.

By next week every entrant may expect a notification of opponent and the date, time and place of play. In order that the championships may be completed within a reasonable time, no postponement of any match can be permitted.

Failure to appear within fifteen minutes of the appointed time will be regarded as a "scratching."

The revised official rules of the Table Tennis Association, which will govern the championships, have now been printed, and copies (4d. post free) may be obtained from Colonel Bartlett, National Institute for the Blind, Great Portland-street, W.1., who is also arranging that area organisers shall receive supplies.

SINKING BOAT LEAP.

Woman Picks up Child and Jumps to Safety on Another Vessel.

As the steamer Austral Mead was entering Alexandra Dock, Hull, yesterday, it came into collision with a string of keels which were being towed.

One of the keels—the Pioneer—owned and commanded by Mr. T. Carmichael, was sunk. His wife, who was on deck, picked up her child and jumped with it on to another keel, and her husband, the only man on the keel, was also saved.

POISONED PETS.

Prize Cats and Dogs Fall Victims to Deadly Food at Bromley.

Bills posted by the R.S.P.C.A. in the Bromley (Kent) district give warning of the mysterious poisoning of dogs and cats.

"Deadly poison in raw meat is used," states the local inspector. "The victims die in two or three minutes."

The latest animals that have been poisoned include two prize cats, a bull terrier and a Pekinese dog.

RACE FOR LIFE.

Signalman's Dash to Snatch Boy of Three from Path of Express.

Seeing a boy aged three walking on the railway line towards a Waterloo-Portsmouth express, Charles Sansom, a signalman at Havant, dashed from his box to the line.

He rescued the child, who is the son of a Portsmouth accountant, but there was only a yard or so to spare before the express thundered past.

TAR TANK BURSTS.

Crowd Watches Roadway 'Fly Paper'
Catch Passing Motorists.

A coat of tar of considerable thickness was deposited over a stretch of the Edgware road 100 yards in length yesterday afternoon.

Holding several tons, a travelling tank burst suddenly, and the tar belched forth, spreading rapidly and leaving a sticky expanse.

Crowds on the pavement derived considerable entertainment from watching the capture of this huge flypaper, motorists and cyclists, who ran unwittingly into what appeared to be a stretch of well-kept road, finding to their cost a quagmire from which escape was difficult. Subsequently the traffic was held up.

THOSE NEW LAID EGGS.

Owing to heavy arrivals of eggs in this country an authority in the trade in London states that it should now be possible for the public to buy a good egg at 2d. and a new laid egg at 2½d.
